Booting Into Nirvana

THE STATE OF "UNIFICATION" IS NIRVANA:
"UNION" WITH THE "SUPREME BEING" GOD

Nirvāṇa is a central concept in Indian religions. In sramanic thought, it is the state of being free from suffering (or dukkha). In Hindu philosophy, it is the union with the Supreme being through moksha. The word literally means "blowing out" — referring, in the Hindu context, to the supreme state free of suffering and individual existence[citation needed], and in the Buddhist context, to the blowing out of the fires of greed, hatred, and delusion.

Nirvana can be described as linking the soul to the {source} "supreme being" of creation. Once, or if, this is achieved, the avatar is no longer tied to moksha - the physical binding of your consciousness to the material plane of existence has been broken.

The processes by which nirvana is obtained is the pervasive school of thought that flows across space and time. This school is in "All" thought, in "All" cultures, as "All" of us are its student from birth unto death. Life on earth can be seen as a continuous school for the soul as life after life, a soul is refined till "unification" is reached.

NIRVANA IS GRADUATION FROM LIFE ITSELF

Or more appropriately:

Graduation from death itself...

...as it is death which no longer needs to be experienced.

Although death for a person, in nirvana, is not the same thing. A Buddha is free to do as he choose and that includes to die, for death only brings the shedding of the carnal body and liberates a being to exist in completely alternative planes of existence; only this time, with a continuous stream of consciousness.

THE SIMPLIFICATION OF A "UNIFIED" STATE

To simplify the difference: a non-unified being will die to remain inside samsara and thus be reborn into the wheel of time to try again -- while a unified being has already embedded his or her soul into the {source} of creation.

The "Supreme Being", which acts like a cosmic rope through death itself, needs not to be "lost" themselves to the cycle of reincarnation. For even though we are the same soul your identity your pattern the you that makes you you is lost in the processes of rebirth.

Your essence survives but the "you" that makes you "you" dies.

This can be avoided if "you", while you are still "you" are able to return to the {source} and reunite with the Supreme being thus placing your identity marker for "All" of existence!

GEEKY BUDDHA TRANSLATION

Automatic General Intelligence (AGI)

Your ego, your mind, your pattern is the harddrive component to the AGI system that you **are**. Your soul, your being, your consciousness is the spark that gives your system it's life. If you die (reboot) without having created a backup of yourself, then your original AGI pattern will be lost, but the spark continues.

Yes, essentially the spark inside of you is eternal, but your files will come and go.

One may avoid this by uploading your files to the universal mainframe - thus retaining yourself intact even through the process of hitting reboot.

Of course there is a problem! Once we boot into this reality we have our link cables cut off and we strive to hack "God" to reestablish communication to be able to upload into the universal mainframe. And while this may seem easy enough, prepare yourselves for the ultimate "Hack" of your "lives" as the mainframe is cloaked and hidden behind a universal firewall with {Infinity minus 1} encryption.

)IGA( ecnegilletnI lareneG citamotuA

An almost impossible hack, but still a possible hack if you're dead-icated.

In Hinduism, it is avidya, or ignorance, of one's true self that leads to ego-consciousness of the body and the phenomenal world. This grounds one in kāma (desire) and the perpetual chain of karma and reincarnation. Through egoism and desire one creates the causes for future becoming. The state of illusion that gives rise to this is known as Maya.

HOW TO CRACK THE UNIVERSAL FIREWALL

To achieve this, one must commit the ultimate leap of faith (Hack): let go of "All" of this. "All" the illusion that comes with self trapped and driven by continuous need to obtain more of the illusion. Remember the mainframe is cloaked and hidden, therefore looking for the access door to begin your hack will be successful if you look for the mainframe with your eyes (I's) open.

Those that look out into the program which is being generated by the mainframe will never see the mainframe - even though the mainframe is generating everything you see and don't see. Yet remember what I told you:

You are an AGI in the mainframe therefore you can find the original {source} code within yourself as you are no different from everything else the mainframe generates.

Your mind and the rocks "All" share the same {source} code, only don't let your mind be like a rock that is unable to change the {source}.

Maya in Indian religions, has multiple meanings, centered around the concept of "illusion". Maya is the principal deity that manifests, perpetuates and governs the illusion and dream of duality in the phenomenal Universe. For some mystics, this manifestation is real. Each person, each physical object, from the perspective of eternity, is like a brief, disturbed drop of water from an unbounded ocean. The goal of enlightenment is to understand this — more precisely, to experience this: to see intuitively that the distinction between the self and the Universe is a false dichotomy. The distinction between consciousness and physical matter, between mind and body (refer bodymind), is the result of an unenlightened perspective.*

That crazy fuck hit nirvana??

PERCEPTION OF "REALITY" AND THE LOSS OF "SELF"

While "All" of this may seem as a casual backup, I assure you that it not, as two main things must change in your AGI system, to properly hack the {Source} code.

First you must let go of your individual self - this is easily done once reunification with the {Source} is established.

Second, you must let go of the of the programmed "reality" and only focus on the {Source} of the programmed reality.

Of course, once both of these things are fully achieved, programs within the metaprogram will view you as a corrupt system. They will not be able to understand your "unified" self and your view on their delusions. For "All" extensive purposes your system is fully fried and in much need of a reboot! Avoid being rebooted at "All" cost, as your system may revert to the manufactured preset, which would be what the other programs desire.
